To Be Free From Harmful Radioactive

Contamination in Our Food Supply

“Peer-reviewed research published in the Swiss Med journal found that routine ingestion of so-called ‘low-dose’ Cesium-137 led to significant bioaccumulation in the vital organs of children examined at autopsy. ... The precautionary principle dictates that much lower limits need to be imposed for the foodstuffs eaten by our infants and children, who are at the most risk from routine exposure to ionizing radiation.”

—Steven Starr, Senior Scientist of Physicians for Social Responsibility (statement to the FDA, June 2013)
